SCIENCE TEACHERS’ CONFERENCE

© ghent city

The fourteenth edition of the Flemish Science Teachers' Conference was held on November 15th in Gent. Sandra Vanhove, Science Education Manager at the International Polar Foundation, attended the event to raise interest about the IPF's education projects amongst the teachers of Belgium's Flanders Region.

A wide range of book companies, organisations and associations presented their products and resources in the hopes to gain visibility amongst the science teachers' community of Flanders. Sandra Vanhove gave three conferences about the upcoming Class Zero Emission (an interactive exhibition centre which will introduce students to the breathtaking world of the Arctic and Antarctic) and the new Educapoles website and resources available in Dutch (online as soon as January 2009).