BELARE

Physicist, surveyor and astronomer leave on expedition to Princess Elisabeth Base in Antarctica

share

Three scientists are leaving Brussels for a one-month scientific expedition to the Princess Elisabeth base in Antarctica. Among the three scientists are two members of Defence: a physicist and a surveyor. The third is an astronomer from Ghent University. This was reported by the Defence press service.

Technology & Science

share

Three scientists are leaving Brussels for a one-month scientific expedition to the Princess Elisabeth base in Antarctica. Among the three scientists are two members of Defence: a physicist and a surveyor. The third is an astronomer from Ghent University. This was reported by the Defence press service.

Head over to the VRT news website to read the entire article about the mission by clicking on the link below!

https://www.vrt.be/vrtnws/nl/2023/12/11/prinses-elisabethbasis-antarctica-expeditie/

Download