Everything Is Changing is a biweekly podcast by REVOLVE Media, which explores how the world is adapting to sustainability through in-depth conversations with experts, innovators, and thought leaders. Each episode of the podcast focuses on one of five key themes: Ecosystems, Energy, Mobility, Water, and Circular Solutions.

Alain was chosen to be interviewed for the podcast because of his passion for the polar regions and their importance in addressing climate change, as well as his unique career as an engineer, mountain guide, polar explorer, and founder of the International Polar Foundation.

In the podcast, Alain discusses the inspiration behind his unique career path, how he discovered his passion for the polar regions, the importance of polar science and why the poles matter for climate action, designing and building the world's first and only zero-emission polar research station, the Princess Elisabeth Antarctica, the urgency of taking action to reduce our impact on the climate, and hope for the future.

REVOLVE Media inspires climate action by keeping its audience informed about the circular economy, ecosystem restoration, the energy transition, sustainable mobility and water resources. It publishes an award-winning quarterly magazine focusing on different angles of sustainability.
